It was also linked to the unification of Upper Egypt and the Nile Delta under King Mina. It continued to serve as Egypt's administrative and military center under the Old Kingdom and the New Kingdom.

The most exquisite examples of Egyptian architecture and art may be seen at Memphis, which was home to the idol of the deity Ptah. His enormous tomb extended from Abu Rawash in the north to Lasht in the south.

Following that, we will continue our tour by going to the Giza Pyramids, an ancient site in Egypt that contains the Great Sphinx, the Pyramid of Khafre, the Pyramid of Menkaure, and other related structures. These monuments were constructed between around 2600 and 2500 BC during the Fourth Dynasty of the Old Kingdom in ancient Egypt. The location also has a number of temples, tombs and the remnants of a settlement of laborers.

After enjoying a delectable lunch at a neighborhood eatery in Cairo, we will continue our explorations by traveling to another well-known city. In the Arab Republic of Egypt's Giza Governorate, Saqqara is one of the towns that make up the Badrasheen Center. In Saqqara, some Egyptian aristocrats started constructing their tombs. The Director's Bridge, a mastaba constructed during the reign of Kha-Sakhmoy, the final king of the Second Dynasty, was one of the earliest royal buildings in Saqqara.
