Day trip to Rashid from Alexandria

In addition to its distinctive geographical, historical and heritage features, Rashid's geographical location, the city - 60 kilometers east of Alexandria and administratively affiliated with the Beheira Governorate - has been the site of important events throughout history, including the Rosetta Stone, which deciphered ancient Egyptian civilization and is currently in the British Museum, whose 200th anniversary was celebrated a few days ago.

Getting to Rashid is easier from Alexandria, as the journey between them does not exceed 60 minutes, you can visit it with us through our daily trips from Alexandria to Rashid, in which it is available for the visitor to be accompanied by a tour guide to introduce the landmarks.

As Rashid is located on the Nile River, this makes it possible to ride boats moored on its banks, and enjoy a picnic inside the waters of the Nile, which is one of the most popular tourist attractions to Rashid, and you can wander around as you wish for half an hour or an hour, and you can only sit inside the boat, provided you drink a beverage such as tea or coffee.

Naturally, fish and shellfish are the city's most popular foods, and fishing has become the primary employment of its residents given its location at the meeting point of the Mediterranean Sea and the Nile River. More than 100 different types of fish, some from the Mediterranean shore and others from the Nile River. Don't miss the seafood experience.

Upon arrival in Rashid, you are in for an entertaining and cultural journey, from sightseeing to sightseeing, you will enjoy a visit to :

Rashid National Museum

The museum consists of two buildings, one of which is an archaeological building consisting of three floors, and was originally the home of 'Arab Kali Hussein Bey', who was the governor of the city during the Ottoman era. In the 1960s the building was converted into a small museum to highlight the role of the city of Rashid in resisting the French campaign. Then the English Fraser campaign, and in 1986 the museum was developed and reopened to reflect the history of the city of Rashid.

Qaitbay Fortress

Located on the western shore of the Nile River, the Mamluk Sultan Al-Ashraf Qaitbay built it in 901 AH and is one of the fortress-like military facilities in its square construction and four round towers, surrounded by trenches whose traces still exist today.

The castle is also known by a number of names, such as 'Tabiya Rashid', 'Rosetta Castle', and 'Fort Julien', after one of Napoleon's assistants, where troops from the French campaign landed in 1799, and is the place where the 'Rosetta Stone' was found. After your day trip to Rosetta is over, you will begin your return trip to Alexandria.
