Its importance far outweighed that of the earlier Aswan Low Dam, which was initially built downstream in 1902. Following the Egyptian Revolution of 1952, the government made building the High Dam a top priority based on the Low Dam's success, which was then being used to its fullest capacity. The dam's ability to better control flooding, provide more water storage for irrigation, and produce hydroelectricity was seen as essential to Egypt's planned industrialization. The High Dam has had a tremendous impact on Egypt's economy and culture, much like the earlier implementation. then have a lunch at a local restaurant.

The two temples at Abu Simbel are regarded as the pinnacles of ancient Egypt because of their distinctive architecture. They display the splendor and majesty of the future Kingdom. The four global gods Ptah, Re-Her-Akhtey, Amun-Re, and Ramesses II were honored at the temple that bears their names. The Sun Temple of Ramses II is another name for the enormous Abu Simbel temple.

In a symbolic fashion, Ramesses II, Nefertari, Hathor, and the Sun God are united as one in the Temple of Queen Nefertari, which is also known as the Temple of Hathor because she was the Sun God's wife. Spend about three hours there before returning to Aswan hotel, overnight.

After the High Dam was built, threatening to permanently drown the temple, it was moved to its current location.
